A Unique Quality of the Book

Information Loss by Readers who are desirous of obtaining the new (11th) edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica at the lowest possible price and of having it delivered with the least possible delay are notified that unless they make application on or before the 31st instant their orders cannot be included in the lists of the first distribution nor will they be privileged to rank as "previous-to-publication" subscribers. Owing to the extraordinary success of the present issue (26,626 sets having been sold to 5 P. M. yesterday), and the consequent pressure on the manufacturing department, all data for the revision and adjustment of existing printing and binding contracts must be to hand by the end of the month. Orders received after May 31 will be held over until the first distribution is complete and then executed at prices which will be 50c. per volume or $14.50 per set higher than those now in force.

Of the 9th Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica there were sold in Great Britain and the British Colonies 82,000 sets in its genuine or authorized form, and, in this country 50,000 sets, besides over 300,000 sets of mutilated and incomplete "reprints."

In view of the fact that no complete new edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica has been issued for more than twenty years it is not surprising that the accumulated demand for the 11th Edition as now materializing in orders is proving to be too great to be handled except with a definite foreknowledge of its extent.

The printing and binding of so large a work (29 volumes, 27,000 pages, 40,000,000 words) is without precedent in publishing, and any one who considers the matter will readily perceive the urgency of the necessity which compels the Cambridge University Press, with manufacturing resources already taxed to the utmost, to determine the present distribution on the 31st.

Applicants who for one reason or another may prefer to take delivery of their books next fall or at the end of the year may do so, and their payments need not begin until delivery has been made. It is necessary, however, that their applications shall be registered during the present month; that is, before the closing of the current

Those who have not yet investigated the present offer are reminded that by writing or telegraphing for a prospectus at once they can still do so in time to register their applications within the next few days. This opportunity is obviously one calling for prompt

The Encyclopaedia Britannica is not only the oldest encyclopaedia in the modern sense of the term, but the only work of "general reference with a demonstrated capacity for growth and development." Of the twenty or more notable encyclopaedias published in various countries since the first issue of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in 1768, some never attained to a second edition, and only "Brockhaus" can claim a continued existence of more than fifty years, if we except "Ersch and Gruber," projected in 1813, and still incomplete. The current (14th) edition of "Brockhaus" contains 16 million words, as against 40 million in the new Encyclopaedia

The convenient arrangement which is one of the most important novel features of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica not only makes it easy to acquire fresh information, but also insures the information thus gained against loss by forgetfulness, precisely as a house is insured against loss by fire. None of the minor annoyances of life can be more distressing than to b unable to recal some group of facts that were quite familiar and yet seem to have escaped the memory just when they were needed. The name of the book rom which the information was derived may have been forgotten, or the book may be out of reach; and even if it can be found, chapter after chapte may be searched in van for the page that s known to be somewhere between the covers. In the case of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica, the 40,000 articles sub-divide knowledge of every kind in so clear and orderly a manner that the reader finds in them not only a convenient memorandum of knowledge he has already acquired, but an inexhaustible store of new information upon which to draw.

* The first edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica was issued at Edinburgh in 1768-71 by a "Society Gentlemen in Scotland."

Successive editions have appeared at an average interval of 14 years.

The last completely new edition was the 9th, in 25 volumes, issued volume by volume between 1875 and 1889.

The new 11th Edition has been edited and written as a complete whole.

All the volumes are of even date, 1910.

The contributors, 1,500 in number, include the great scholars, the leading authorities and the best practical experts of all civilized countries. The total expense of production has been $1,150,000, including editorial expenses of $815,000.

450 full-page plates and 569 maps.

The Index (Vol. 29) will contain 500,000 references. Printed on India paper, each volume is but one inch thick.

Printed on ordinary paper each volume is 234 inches thick and weighs seven pounds.

The volumes on India paper lose nothing in legibility, and can be bent back and held in one hand and read with all the convenience of a periodical.

The 28 volumes of text comprise 40,000 articles, and contain 27,000 pages, 7,000 illustrations,

FROM A THEOLOGICAL PROFESSOR

I am most impressed by two qualities in the new magnificent Encyclopaedia Britannica. There is first a note of distinction in style rarely met in works of reference. The second quality, expected indeed, but attained far beyond my hopes, is the note of authority.

FROM THE PRESIDENT OF A ROMAN CATHOLIC COLLEGE The new Britannica is nonpareil in fulness, style and finish. It is wonderful that such a work can be furnished at so moderate a price.

The work in 28 volumes and Index is in two forms: (1) on India Paper, very light and opaque, in three styles of binding: Cloth, Full Flexible Sheepskin and Full Flexible Morocco, the Volumes being each One Inch Thick (about 960 to 1,060 pages). The India Paper Edition bound in Full Sheep or Full Morocco is strongly recommended.

(2) On ordinary book-paper in three styles of Binding: Cloth, Half Morocco and Full Morocco, the volumes being each 234 inches thick (about 960 to 1,060 pages). Illustrated Prospectus (40 pages), 56 specimen pages on India paper, 4 specimen plates and form of application showing the special advance terms, now open for only 7 days longer, will be sent upon receipt of request.
